ABBREVIATIONS AND EXPLANATIONS.

b. for born; d. for died; m. for married; bapt. for baptized; res. for residence.

The three numerals over a sketch of an individual are explained as follows:

The first figure indicates the person's number. The Roman characters show in what generation he is, and the figure to the right is the number of the parent. Thus, on page (12), 3 II 1 Rev. Nathaniel Wheatleigh's number is 3; he is of the second generation; and son of No. 1—John Wheatleigh. So one may start with the present generation and trace the line back to the first or any generation by the numbers.

INTRODUCTION.

The records embraced in this history do not assume to be a full genealogy of the Wheatley family. They are, however, the result of more than twenty years of diligent and persevering efforts to make them correct and reliable. Where incomplete, the fault is largely due to neglect of members of the branch slighted, to answer repeated requests for sketches and records.

The gathering of material has been a task requiring great patience and much labor, correspondence and arranging of facts being largely done after the hour most people were abed, such being the only leisure hours, of the busy years of a physician's life.

A few of the early records were collected by Luther Wheatley (b. 1783 d. 1859). These were added to by Charlotte Wheatley Bowman (1824- 1882) and carried forward by Edith Wheatley Wilcox (1849-1881) whom I assisted, and I have brought forward her unfinished task.

A large amount of history was gleaned with the aid of officers of the New England Historic and Genealogical Society in Boston. The Genealogies published, of the Wingate, Robins, Tenney, Perry and Loveland families have been searched for data, some portions having been taken from them bodily.

And I am under great obligations to Col. F. M. Kimball of Topeka, Kan., Dr. John R. Ham of Dover, N. H., Flora Wheatley Foss of Hardwick, Vt., and Col. Ainsworth of the Pension Bureau at Washington, D. C., while the labors of Josephine A. Peavey of Farmington, N. H., in gathering and preparing the material for the press, has made possible the publication, at this time.

The personal examination of church, town and probate records of several states has secured the connecting links of the present generation with their ancestors in this and the old country.

There is a moral and philosophical respect for our ancestors, which elevates the character and inspires the heart. The pride of ancestry is the foundation of the pride of character, without which no man can be great.

Our family is eminently a domestic race; loving their homes and firesides; shunning notoriety; not aspiring to political or other public favors; but faithful, honest, industrious and economical. The rogue's gallery or the police reports are the last places to look for a Wheatley. Rather disposed to keep their own counsel; and somewhat stubborn when opposed.

The family has an honorable record in all our country's wars, from the early colonial times. All four of Capt. John Wheatley's sons served in the Revolutionary army. The Revolutionary Rolls, State papers of several states, and the pension and war departments at Washington, have aided in furnishing valuable history.

It seems that the Wheatleights were Protestants early in the 17th century. In the fall of 1626, Charles I of England sent a naval force to Dieppe for the use of Lewis, King of France, against the Huguenots at La Rochelle. The sailors discovered his purpose and objected. They drew up a remonstrance to Pennington, their commander, and signing all their names in a circle lest he should discover the ring-leaders, they laid it under his prayer book.

This we believe to be the first record of a "Round Robin." In this circle we find the name of A. Wheatleigh, from Wells, Somerset, England. Admiral Pennington declared "that he would rather be hanged in England for disobedience, than fight against his brother Protestants on the continent." And the whole squadron sailed for home. But La Rochelle, the Huguenots headquarters, fell into the hands of the French in 1628, and they were scattered, many coming to Maryland, Virginia and South Carolina. In these settlements were several Wheatleights. Many of their descendants still live in these localities. Three Wheatleys are known to have come to New England. Their posterity have scattered over these states, and spread to New York and the West.

James Wheatleigh settled at Wethersfield, Conn., in 1638, Capt. John Wheatley or Wheatleigh settled in Norwich, Conn., in 1732, and merchant John Wheatley lived in Boston, Mass., from 1745 to 1774. James Wheatleigh assisted in drawing up a constitution for the government of Connecticut Colony, which was adopted in January, 1639. Among his papers we find the coat of arms here given.

Whether they are to be legitimately borne by the descendants of John Wheatley may be problematical.

This is not described in Burke's General Armory, although there are eight separate Wheatley arms and borne by ten different families, recorded in this Encyclopedia of Heraldry. The first one was granted by Edward III to John Wheatley Esq., of Castle-Bromwich, Co. Leicester, in 1356. About fifty years later his son William Wheatley Esq. gained additional favors from King Henry IV. William Wheatley Esq. left no son to bear the name, so the arms were preserved to his daughter Thomasine Wheatley, and she married John Dannot.

Records of coats of arms of some other families mentioned in this history can be found in the appendix. In Burke's General Armory there are records of families of the following names. Some have one or two, while others have several. The Wood family has one hundred and two records. They are: Abbott Allen, Archer, Austin, Bach, Barker, Barnes, Bell, Bowman, Brown, Carpenter, Clark, Craig, French, Foss, Hall, Hastings, Hodge, Hutchinson, Loveland, Paine, Pellet, Shepherd, Skinner, Waterman, Welch, Wheeler, White, Wilcox, Wingate and Wood.

Our branch being directly interested only in those of Sir Nathaniel Wheatley (11) of Frome, Somersetshire; and of William Wheatley Esq., (77) of Echlingfield, Co. Sussex.

The illustrations show the correct interpretation of the records that are also given.

ENGLISH GENEALOGY.

Correspondence with Hon. Henry White, who is chargé d'affaires at the U. S. Legation in London, resulted in arrangements with Mr. A. B. Stevens of Trafalgar Square, London, to search English records for the early history of the Wheatley family.

Mr. Stevens seems to have done the work faithfully, and traces the connection between the English and American branches of the family.

During the last century this once populous Wheatley family of yeomen, seafaring and professional men have nearly disappeared from England, either having moved to America or died out. It is a matter of pride to the name, that the family has retained its identity so long.

In Mr. Stevens' report of his investigation is much that does not directly interest this branch of the Wheatley family, but it may serve to fix the ancestry of many Wheatleys, who came to America at earlier or later dates than Captain John, father of our branch. Mr. Stevens worked back from John Wheatleigh, a Boston merchant who settled there in 1745 but returned to England in the spring of 1774.

In volume I of the English "Genealogist" and "Somerset, Berkshire and other visitations," is to be found the pedigree of the Wheatleys springing from John and Thomas who appear to have been brothers. Many of the early records here given were taken from a book in the possession of Sir Harold Wheatley, who lived in County Bedford and died in 1677 about 86 years of age.

Later dates have been found in church records and probate registry of the different counties and in files of wills at Somerset House and Doctors Commons.

The search of admiralty records gives names and some dates of those who served in the navy, but the English admiralty records are very indefinite and incomplete. Therefore the identity of individuals who thus served is only proved by parish records and the coincidence of names and periods.

Where there was room for a doubt about the identity of two or more records of the same individual, the doubtful items have been omitted.

The first trace of Wheatleys we have been able to find was in 1356, when Sir John Wheatley lived at Castle-Bromwich, Leicestershire, England. But at present we have been able to trace the genealogical chain unbroken only back to the brothers John and Thomas who came to the front after the campaigns of Edward Seymour, Duke of Somerset, in Scotland and France in 1544-45. John served as captain and Thomas as a lieutenant. They obtained estates in 1547 at Frome and near Wells, not far from the Mendip Hills in Somersetshire.

In the probate registry at Wells are filed the wills of John Wheatleigh (March 24, 1594) and his widow, Mary Wheatleigh, (April 20, 1595) which are as follows, viz:

Sir Nathaniel was high sheriff of Somersetshire in 1616, making Woodcroft manor his home. His Nuncupative will, dated April 11, 1620, leaves to his son Nathaniel "Hillside," and to his four younger sons, Thomas, William, Richard and John £500 a piece, to be raised out of the farms Penwick and Woodcroft. The residue to his wife, Precilla Wheatleigh.

Rev. John Wheatley, matriculated at Magdalen College, Oxford, m Mary Maudley, who was from a large and prominent family of Somersetshire.

Was rector of Gately, Hants, in 1645. His loyalty to Charles I. drew the displeasure of the Cromwell party and he was sequestered. Later making his home at Westham, Essex. Evidently spent his declining years with his youngest son at Battle, near Hastings, Sussex, where he died and was buried at Senlac Hill, December 4, 1691.

Nuncupative will, dated October 8, 1691, made his son William his heir, also giving £900 and household goods to daughter Mary, £300 each to his grandchildren, Henry and James Fitzroy; Mary and William Wheatley.

William Wheatley, Esq., of Streatley Manor, near Senlac Hill, was bailiff of Battle in 1705, m Mary Haynes of Bristol in 1685. He was engaged at Bristol in the manufacture of saltpeter; and apparently held crown contracts. After moving to Battle he started the manufacture of gunpowder, which in modern times has become very extensive. He was knighted at Battle 1710.

83. Mary, b 1687.

84. William, b 1689.

85. Richard. b 1695.

84 VI 77

Dr. William Wheatley entered Magdalen College, Oxford, 1705, m Annie Waring of Belfast.

In 1720 William Wheatley was serving at the Dublin station as naval surgeon. At the time there were 76 ships in the British navy. And there are records of Surgeon Wheatley's transfer to other stations. He was with the fleet sent to the West Indies in 1727. But nothing can be learned from the records, although tradition claims that he died in the service about 1731. His family remained in Dublin. John Wheatley, his only son, entered Trinity College, Dublin, but left before the end of the first year, and was apprenticed to a shipmaster named Charles Cary. His mother had hoped to fit him to fill a position in the navy.

BETSEY P. WOOD WHEATLEY. (see pg 50)

Capt. Cary sold his indenture to a farmer near Norwich, Conn., 1732.

From him sprung a large branch of the Wheatley family in America.

86. John, b Dublin, November 15, 1718.

87. Jane, b Dublin, May 12, 1720. Died young.

88. Lucinda, b Dublin, September 4, 1723.

LIEUT. THOMAS WHEATLEY.

Thomas Wheatley was evidently a brother of John Wheatleigh, whose genealogy we have traced down to Capt. John Wheatley, the father of our branch of the family in America. I do not give wills, etc., in this line that Mr. Stevens furnished, but will preserve the line of descent, hoping it may be of some service to other branches of the family.

In Burke's visitations of 1690 is traced the Wheatley pedigree for five generations. In 1547 Thomas Wheatley owned Balwoodston, Wells, Somersetshire. This estate evidently passed into the possession of John about 1572, and Thomas moved to Sonning in Berkshire. He was father of nine children.

2. Henry, b 1560, had five children.

3. Grace, m Henry Parker of Surrey, near London.

4. Frances, m James Bassett of Uley county, Gloucester.

Captain John Wheatley.

Father of the New England Branch of the Wheatley Family in America.

John Wheatley was born in Dublin, Ireland, in 1718; died in Lebanon, N. H., July 30, 1786. He and his widow were buried in an early selected burying ground, on a hill southeast of the present village of West Lebanon, N. H. A Bible given him by his mother in 1732—at which time he was 14 years of age—is now in existence. His father was a surgeon in the British navy, where he died in 1731. His mother and a younger sister resided in Dublin, where he was kept in school until 14 years old, when, as his mother intended him for the navy, he was bound to the commander of a vessel for the term of seven years, thus fitting him to be a mariner. The commander agreed to take him to Dublin to see his mother once each year.

They sailed directly to America, landing at New London or Norwich, Conn. The captain perfidiously sold his indentures to a farmer in that vicinity, with whom John was bound to remain until he attained his majority. Here, at first, he suffered much hardship, not being accustomed to physical labor. However, it is believed that he remained with this farmer until the expiration of the indenture, and that he received as kind treatment as could be expected. It is related that on sending him to school the teacher returned word that he could not instruct a pupil so advanced.

John soon began teaching school himself, and followed the sea during intervals between terms. He intended sailing to England to visit his relatives, but never found it convenient. Finally business associations and family ties completely weaned him from his old home. In 1742 he married Submit Peck Cooke, widow of Aaron Cooke, daughter of Benjamin Peck, a wealthy resident of Franklin, Conn. Her brother, Capt. Bela Peck, was father of Harriet Peck Williams, who gave the Peck Memorial Library to Norwich, Conn. Judge A. Huntington said of Capt. John Wheatley: "He was of plain manners and of incorruptible integrity. His few words were always those of good sense and truth. The weight of his influence was given to the best interests of society. He was an able and courageous soldier." He commanded a company in the French war during the campaign at the North in 1759, when Ticonderoga, Crown Point and other forts in that vicinity were captured by the English.

A powder horn, curiously wrought, presented to him by an Indian chief, is now among the family relics. This horn is seventeen inches long and ten inches in circumference at the largest point. Engraved around the lower end of it are the words, "Capt. John Wheatley, Crown Point, October ye 3d, 1759," in well formed letters surrounded by an ornamental border. Immediately above this is represented New York bay, with Hudson river emptying into it, with its course winding around nearly the whole length of the horn. East of the mouth of the Hudson river, and between it and Long Island and the Sound, stands the city of New York, finely executed, and embracing about forty houses with several church spires rising from their midst, some surmounted with the figure of a cock and others with a cross. Upon the west of the river, a little lower down, stands another city, smaller yet equally well built, marked "Amboy." South of New York city is marked "Rhode Island," now known as Staten Island. Along the Hudson are scattered farm houses until a collection is designated as "Greenbush." Near the mouth of the Mohawk we find the city of Albany, constructed like that of New York. On the right bank of the Mohawk are two buildings marked "H. M."—half moon. A little further north is a fort marked "Stillwater," where his son Luther died eighteen years later, after being wounded in the battle of Bemis Heights. On a small stream tributary to the Hudson from the west, stands Fort Saratoga; north of this is a fort marked "F. E."—Fort Edward. Directly west is seen Lake George, containing many small islands and a sloop under full sail. Lake Champlain is but partly shown, merely enough to designate the situation of two forts; one marked "Crown Point" and the other "Ticonderoga." South of Crown Point is a large fort unmanned, probably meant for Fort Ann. We turn to the Mohawk valley and find first the city of Schenectady, containing some fifteen houses. Upon the opposite bank, a little to the west, stands Fort Johnson, while opposite this is Fort Hunter. Forts Edward and Crown Point have the English flag spread to the breeze, and within the walls we have a birds-eye view of the barracks for the soldiers, houses, and all the internal defences of such a place. Upon the upper part of the horn is an animal represented with the head of a unicorn and the body of a lion, with one hind leg chained to the collar about its neck. This was probably taken from the family coat-of-arms. The letters "J. W.," tastefully wrought in scrolls, occupy the rest of this curious relic of fine Indian work.

During the French war Spain had become an ally of France, and in 1761 an English force of ten thousand men was sent to capture Havana, Cuba. A Spanish force of twenty-seven thousand soldiers and a large squadron in the harbor withstood the attack.

From military orders and state papers of Massachusetts and Connecticut we find that Capt. John Wheatley, with a company of marines from Connecticut, joined the expedition against Havana, commanded by Gen. Phineas Lyman, with Lieutenant-Colonel Israel Putnam of Danvers, Mass., in charge of marines from Connecticut. He was Capt. Wheatley's immediate superior officer. Before the expedition returned Capt. Wheatley became paymaster of the Colonial troops. His family, except John Wheatley 2d, who accompanied him to Cuba, lived in Boston during their absence, (from 1760 to 1762).

The troops from Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York and New Jersey, to the number of twenty-three hundred, sailed from New York about the middle of May in fourteen transports. They joined the English forces before Havana July 20, and entered into the thick of the fight, which resulted in the fall of the city August 14, 1762. But disease had worked greater havoc than Spanish bullets, and there were scarcely fifty Colonial troops left. All came back on one ship. The prize money resulting from the capture, and divided among the soldiers and sailors, amounted to over $7,000,000. Capt. Wheatley drew $1135.24. Some of the English officers pocketed over $600,000 apiece.

His family lived in Boston, Mass., and Norwich, Conn., until after the close of the French war, 1763, when in the spring of 1765 they moved, except Mary and John Wheatley 2d, to Lebanon, N. H. On this journey he cut a hickory cane, which has been preserved, headed and marked "L. W.," and remains in the possession of the descendants of Luther Wheatley.

Captain Wheatley was the first man to fix his habitation amidst the lofty pines on the plains where since has risen the pleasant and flourishing village of Lebanon Centre. He was moderator of the first town meeting held there, Sept. 12, 1765; the first town clerk, which office he held for nearly twenty years; the first civil magistrate, the first schoolmaster, of whom many anecdotes are told showing his fertile originality in developing the best qualities of his pupils; the first representative of Lebanon in the New Hampshire Legislature, and the first and only representative of Lebanon in the Vermont Legislature, at the time the sixteen border towns gave allegiance to Vermont. He was clerk of a company of proprietors of Lebanon in 1765; and in 1786 drew up a petition to the New Hampshire Legislature, asking for a new charter to replace their first one, that had been partially destroyed by mice. He acted as chairman of the legislative committee on boundaries, October 3, 1768; was appointed justice of the peace for Grafton county, September 5, 1774, and reappointed April 3, 1779, and October 5, 1785. He served as a member of the Vermont Legislature in 1777, but withdrew October 22, 1778. At a convention of committees from the several towns on the grants east of the Connecticut river, held June 24, 1778, John Wheatley was chairman of a committee selected to receive and adjust claims for services done in preparing and completing the union with the State of Vermont. His name was signed to several documents relative to the dispute concerning the jurisdiction over the New Hampshire grants east of the Connecticut river, during the year 1782. A petition was drawn up and circulated by Capt. John Wheat'ey, dated June 10, 1782, in regard to the establishing of a boundary between Lebanon and Enfield.

In a Thanksgiving sermon preached by Rev. Phineas Cooke, the pastor of Lebanon Congregational Church, November 30, 1850, giving a civil and ecclesiastical history of the town, he says: "Were I to single out a man to whom this town, in its early days, was especially indebted for his exertions in its behalf, I would name John Wheatley, Esq."

He did not serve in the revolutionary army, but sent his four sons. Two, John and Luther, were killed fighting for the independence of their country. He died at Lebanon, N. H., in 1786, of a violent fever, being 67 years of age. His widow survived him several years.

To all his acknowledged qualifications for public or private life was added piety and such religious gifts as made him a suitable person to lead in the meetings of the church in the absence of the minister. True to a prominent Wheatley characteristic, he put spirit, energy and perseverance into every enterprise with which he was connected.

SEVEN CHILDREN, SIX BORN IN NORWICH, CONN.

In the American Encyclopædia is the following article: "Phillis Wheatley, a negro poetess, born in Africa in 1755, died in Boston, Mass., December 5, 1794. She was brought to Boston in 1761, and bought by Mrs. John Wheatley, who, noting remarkable exhibitions of intellectual powers and a thirst for books in her servant, set to work to educate her. At the age of 19 Miss Phillis visited England, where she published a work under the following title: 'Poems on Various Subjects, Religious and Moral, by Phillis Wheatley, negro servant of Mrs. John Wheatley of Boston, New England.' She received marked notice from Gen. George Washington for poems she wrote of many of his acts in public life."

There seems to be no doubt that Miss Phillis' mistress was the wife of Capt. John Wheatley.

Mary Wheatley was married in 1771, at her brother John's home in Norwich, Conn., to Rev. John Lothrop; b at Norwich, Conn., in 1739; d in Boston, 9th of April, 1776, and was buried in the Old Granery Graveyard, Boston. On his headstone is the following: "Here lies ye body of John Lothrop, aged about 40 years. Died April ye 9th, 1776." He graduated from Princeton College in 1763, and was pastor of the Second, or Old North Church, Boston, Mass., from 1768 until his death. Mary, his widow, died two years later in Norwich, Conn., without offspring. He was probably an actor in the drama that led to Paul Revere's ride. After Captain Wheatley's family moved to New Hampshire, Phillis, the negress whom Mrs. Wheatley had purchased and began to educate, lived in the Lothrop family. This gave the dusky poetess the advantages of higher education, under the eye of a college graduate.

Lieut. John Wheatley accompanied his father on the expedition against Havana, Cuba, in 1762, and drew about ($17.50) seventeen and a half dollars of prize money. In 1766 he married Jane Cooke of Bozrah, Conn., at which place they lived for a while. Two years later they were living at a place called "Coase," and in 1770 were living east of the Green at Norwich. By old issues of the Packet we find he had a boot and shoe shop near the Packet office, where he made the best of goods, "good work and quick dispatch being the cardinal points of his compass." The next year he moved into the Peck Tavern, across the Green. In the big elm, known as the "Liberty Tree," front of the tavern, was arranged a bower among the branches, supplied with tables and seats for dinner parties and speech-making to the people on the Green. This was connected with an upper window of the tavern by a plank walk. "Here Landlord Wheatley entertained General Washington at dinner when en route to Boston, thus winning a point over his rival, Joseph Peck, who kept the Lothrop Inn across the Green."

June 20, 1776, he was commissioned second lieutenant of Capt. Joshua Huntington's company, in Col. Samuel Selden's Connecticut regiment. He was wounded and taken prisoner (reported "killed or taken") in a battle with the British troops at Harlem Heights, N. Y., September 15, 1776, and died a few days later.

His estate was settled by his widow Jane and brother Andrew, the tavern being run with the assistance of Deodat Little. According to the Norwich Packet they offered also "brown sugar and molasses for sale." His widow and daughter Lucinda moved to Lebanon, N. H. Mrs. Wheatley married a Mr. Bliss. Colonel Bliss, son-in-law of General Taylor, on whose staff he served during the Mexican war, was their grandson.

TWO CHILDREN.

9. Joseph Wheatley, b Bozrah, Conn, 8th April, 1767. In 1782 we find he was serving as a private among the Connecticut troops stationed about New York city, under Captain Potter and Colonel Butler. After the evacuation of the city by the British November 25, 1783, he was discharged and found employment in the fifth ward. Here he was still living in 1818, but no further record can be obtained of him.
10. Lucinda Wheatley, b Norwich, Conn., in 1771. She went to Lebanon with her mother, but no further trace of her is obtainable.

4 II 1

Quartermaster Andrew Wheatley was married at Stafford, Conn., to Rubie Blodgett b Stafford, January 27, 1758; d Hardwick, Vt., October 17, 1856, and lived in Hanover, N. H., until 1816, when he moved to Hardwick, Vt., with his son. Andrew moved to Lebanon with his father, but in October, 1776 he was again at Norwich, Conn., helping to settle up his brother John's estate. The first day of the following year he was commissioned quartermaster of the Fourth Connecticut regiment, in command of Col. Charles Durkee. On November 4, 1778, he was granted a furlough of twenty days by General Parsons, and there is later record on the roll of the field and staff.

He drew a pension of $240 a year. His widow also drew a pension during her life.

Major Nathaniel Wheatley became a member of the New Hampshire militia regiment under Col. Jonathan Chase in 1775. In the War Department at Washington we find the following record: "With men who marched from the county of Cheshire at the requisition of Major General Gates to reinforce the army at Ticonderoga from October 28 to November 18, 1776; on alarm with men from Cornish and adjacent towns to reinforce the garrison at Ticonderoga, from June 27 to July 11, 1777. During this campaign he was appointed senior or color sergeant. He was also with men from Cornish who joined the Continental army under General Gates, near Saratoga, from September 22 to October 23, 1777." At a council holden at Concord, N. H., June 14, 1786, he was nominated major for the Twenty-fourth Regiment, and received the appointment June 5, 1787."

He was married twice, first at Lebanon, 18 January, 1776, to Vinal Bliss, b Lebanon, 15 February, 1758; d Brookfield, 12 February, 1811, and second at Brookfield, 12 November, 1812, to Betsey Bailey, b Brookfield, 11 October 1761; d 5 October, 1827. He lived in Lebanon until 1791, when he moved to Brookfield, Vt., and purchased of Shubal Cross the farm since known as "Willow Grove." It is located in the widest part of the valley of the East branch, or the headwaters of White River. He resided there until his death, after suffering several years with kidney disease. Associated with his arrival in Brookfield is the purchase of a large silver spoon marked "N. W.," which has descended through each generation as the property of the one named Nathaniel. He possessed all his faculties to the last, and said, "He was prepared to die; he trusted his peace was made with God through the Redeemer." He was a consistent and persevering Christian, and possessed the respect and confidence of his townsmen, which was manifested by the important offices they were pleased to bestow upon him.

His first wife was daughter of Azariah Bliss, one of the first settlers, and one of the most respected citizens of Lebanon,

WILLOW GROVE, WHEATLEY HOMESTEAD, BROOKFIELD, VT.

This place was settled by Captain Cross in 1779, who built and lived in a log house. The present two-story white house was built by Major Wheatley in the summer of 1796, with hopper roof. This was changed to its present form, with gables in 1840 by his son, Col. N. Wheatley.

Mr. Perry was one of the first settlers of Cabot; was justice of the peace 50 years, held several town offices and represented the town in the State Legislature two terms. During the war of 1812 word came that the British were at Plattsburg. He, with others, left their farms and business and hastened to the front to repel the foe. At Montpelier, when the company was organized Mr. Perry was elected captain, and when the war was over he brought home a creditable record.

John Wheatley married Nabby Smith. He kept hotel for a while at East Randolph, Vt. Afterwards they removed to a farm on the west hill in Brookfield, where he spent the rest of his life. He had no offspring, but brought up his brother Andrew's three children, Andrew, Mary and Marinda.

15 III 5

Luther Wheatley was married Sept. 27, 1808, at Brookfield, to Sally Stratton. B. Brookfield, 2 September, 1788, d Brookfield, 19 August, 1863.

He lived in Lebanon, N. H., until eight years old, when the family moved to Brookfield, Vt. For three years after marriage they lived in Cabot, Vt., but dwelt the rest of their lives on a farm on the west hill in Brookfield. He was an industrious, practical farmer and an esteemed citizen and was remembered as a conservative man, rather slow of speech, but full of dry humorous sayings, and as a most hospitable host. He began the collection of records from which much early history of the family in America has been preserved for this book.

Col. Nathaniel Wheatley was married March 4th, 1813, at Norwich, Vt., to Lydia Loveland, b Norwich, 3 February, 1790, d Brookfield, 18 June 1857. (See Loveland Genealogy.) She was of the fifth generation from Thomas Loveland who owned land in Glastonbury, afterwards Wethersfield, Conn. He was taxed at that time for five thousand acres. His father came from Norwich, Norfolk County, England.

Lydia Loveland's father Joseph was born in Glastonbury and lived there until March 13, 1776, when he moved to Hanover, N. H., and from there to Norwich, Vt., November 16, 1779, where he died from accidental poisoning September, 1813. May 7th, 1777, he enlisted in Col. Jonathan Chase's Regiment to reinforce the Continental Army at Ticonderoga (State Papers N. H.) His daughter Lydia married Col. Wheatley. They lived at "Willow Grove," the old Wheatley farm. For many years they kept hotel, it being a relay station of the through stages between Montreal and Boston. He was a prominent member and a constant attendant at the Orthodox church and held family prayers daily. Often when returning from church he would discover people fishing and it was his habit to endeavor to dissuade them from such use of the Lord's day. They perhaps excused it with claiming it a necessity to obtain food, whereupon he always loaded them with provisions and sent them home contented. Col. Wheatley gained his title in connection with the state militia; the broad fields west of the branch were used for parade and drill. He represented the town of Brookfield in the state legislature and once served a term in the senate. He was an upright citizen, highly esteemed wherever he was known and always exerted a good influence in the community. Ambitious and enterprising, he was steadily looking forward to modern methods of farming. He first used the up-to-date agricultural implements in his vicinity. His two horse mowing machine was the wonder of the region for some time, people coming long distances to see it work. He was an active whig in politics.

Eunice Wheatley was married October 6, 1813, at Brookfield, to David Loveland (No. 6, Loveland Genealogy) b Norwich, 6 July, 1782, d Norwich, 28 March, 1828. They resided on a farm in Conn. River Valley, which was divided between their two sons George and John. David Loveland made a success of farming, as his perseverance and energy would of anything he might undertake. He worked early and late. It is said that he used to do a full day's work, and then mount his horse to ride thirty miles to see Eunice Wheatley. In her he found a helpmate indeed, one who, after his death, bravely took up the charge of affairs with the care of three young children; and lived to have eleven grandchildren call her blessed. The life of an ordinary farmer, even a successful one, who died at the comparatively early age of forty-five years, is not regarded with interest by the general public, but it is pleasant for his descendants to gather up the traditions which have come down, and, finding nothing to conceal, make mention of his thrift and sterling character. Such a man was David Loveland, who, after attaining his majority remained for a time on the ancestral farm, which he carried on in company with his brother William, and on which he built a house. In 1820 he completed the purchase of a large farm a mile and a half up the Connecticut river, where he several years later built a large house, which has since been occupied by his descendants. His brother John helped in making the bricks, and traced on two of them, while soft, the words, "Fear God and keep his commandments."

So far as is known, our farmer was never gone long, save once, from his native town. His father, with another man, made a contract to build a turnpike in Rowley, Mass., and when it was partly done the partner took the money which had been received and with his horse and chaise went to Canada. The elder Loveland returned home discouraged, feeling that his farm must go to pay the help, but David, young at the time, engaged more men who were good workers, and while William assisted at home, he finished the road and helped to save the homestead.

David Loveland and his wife united, in 1827, with the Norwich South Congregational church, of which both were members at the time of their death.

Wheatley, both residing in Hardwick and members of the Methodist Episcopal church, the latter living on the old Wheatley homestead as one of the fourth generation of Wheatleys to do the same.

Mr. Wheatley was one of the reliable and prominent citizens of the place, having spent nearly his entire life in Hardwick. He was a very indulgent husband and father and a kind neighbor, a man upon whom others naturally leaned for counsel and support. With his wife he united with the Methodist Episcopal church, May 21, 1868, and was a firm and reliable supporter of the church of his choice.

They lived on his father's home farm until 1870, when he went West, locating at Kidder, Mo. Farming there was quite different from working one in Vermont. Hence, after two years sojourn, his ill health and strong attachment for old associations brought him back to Brookfield. He purchased the old Harrison Edson place just north of the Brookfield Centre church. For many years, in fact until his death, this place was the centre of much cordial hospitality. He was deacon and an active member of the 2nd Congregational church of his native town, and was a man of sterling worth of character, who led an upright blameless life. His quiet consistent Christian walk through life, was a constant rebuke to evil and an incentive to good in the community.

Frederic Wheatley was married in May, 1842, to Elizabeth Allis. He made school teaching a success, and was a musician of considerable repute. He taught singing school several winters, but while thus engaged he did not neglect his farm which was at the north end of the west hill in Brookfield, Vt. 49 IV 15

Sarah E. Wheatley was married December 31, 1847 at Brookfield, Vt., to her cousin Andrew Wheatley (72 IV 20). She was an efficient and successful school teacher and her early death was sincerely mourned by a multitude of loyal pupils. Emice L. Wheatley was married November, 1857 at Burlington, Vt., to George Rider. She was a milliner in Burlington for many years. John Wheatley was married March 1st, 1838, at Waterbury, Vt., to Mary L. Spicer, b Waterbury, 13 February, 1820. They began life on the farm given him by his father, on the branch road, it being the first one in Brookfield north of North Rudolph. Here he died at the age of seventy. He was a quiet, industrious, unassuming tiller of the soil; his characteristic moderation served him many a good turn for he never borrowed trouble and made the best of it when thrust upon him. His eyesight failed him during the last six or seven years of his life. He spent much time during 1879 and '80 at the Mary Fletcher hospital at Burlington, Vt., undergoing medical and surgical treatment.

About 1857 he bought the portion given his sister Lucinda on the branch road next neighbor to the old "Homestead." They lived here until 1893, when they moved to Barre, Vt., to live with their daughter Ellen E., where he died at the age of eighty one years.

In many respects the life of William Wheatley was a notable one. The will power, energy and perseverance that characterized it are most worthy of emulation. He took great pride in his dairy, his butter gaining an enviable reputation. He spent most of his time at home, faithful in every duty.

He was a very austere practical farmer, but their happy home was a place of refuge for the discouraged, for his lovely and amiable wife, although quiet, was always more thoughtful of others than of herself. She was a faithful Christian wife and mother and her early death caused the deepest sorrow among her friends and family.

bury, Vt., in 1870, she became an efficient and successful dress-maker. She preferred to "Paddle her own canoe," and remained in single blessedness through life.

Their residence was three years in Cambridge, Mass., nineteen years in Boston, and they then bought a home in Newton Centre in which to spend their declining years. He was a druggist twenty-one years, and then began the manufacture of paste blacking, French dressing, blueing, bronze, etc., under the firm name of B. F. Brown & Co. At his death his son-in-law, Edward Tennessey, bought the business, continuing it under the old name. Vinal, after Mr. Brown's death lived to a good old age with her daughter Ella, enjoying their cares, and extracting more comfort from life than falls to the lot of many widows.

Nathaniel Wheatley was married twice. Married first, 15 February, 1847, at Hartford, Vt., to Betsey Potter Wood, b Westford, 17 June, 1826, d at East Brookfield, Vt., 14 November, 1861. She was the daughter of Judge William Wood who with his father and grandfather, born in Croydon, England, were prominent in shaping the "New Hampshire Grants." They led in the movement of adopting very strong and decided measures in favor of public worship and public instruction. Their descendants, brothers of Mrs. Wheatley, have settled in the Western states and taken with them their principles, morals, and social and intellectual habits, and caused them to take root in new soil. Thus have these Wood boys been prominent in the development of the cities in which they were pioneers.

VINAL WHEATLY BROWN. (55)

Married second, December 18, 1862, at Bellows Falls, Vt., to Mrs. Jane E. (Barnes) Hall, b Brandon, Vt., July 12, 1828. Nathaniel Wheatley was born at "Willow Grove," and it has always been his home except two years soon after his first marriage. His father gave him the part of the home farm next north of the old homestead, but as Colonel Nathaniel was getting old he wanted less care, so he traded with Nathaniel Jr. The fine old house has passed its century of usefulness and has always been owned by a Nathaniel Wheatley. (1902) It seems to present an air of hospitality to every arrival, and has always been established as the headquarters of all returning relatives visiting the scenes of their childhood. The buildings and farm have been much improved during this generation. Its owner becoming a well to do agriculturist has taken pride in keeping up the reputation of his father of being progressive. He gained a start financially by introducing Merino sheep into the locality. Farmers all through this section looked to him for the best registered stock. He lived an upright life, was an industrious law-abiding citizen, much respected, though preferring not to take public office. He served a few terms in managing town affairs, and was postmaster at East Brookfield over twenty years, being appointed by President Lincoln. In politics he had great faith in the protective principles of the Republican party.

THE WHEATLEY REUNION

He'd at "Willow Grove," the old Wheatley homestead, in Brookfield, Vt., July 24, 1879, was the centennial anniversary of the settlement of the farm. On Thursday, the 24th, all the Wheatleys and those who had Wheatley blood in their veins, were invited to the old Wheatley homestead, now occupied by Nathaniel Wheatley, (56 IV 16) to participate in a family reunion, the first of the kind on record. About seventy were present, representing, besides the Wheatley name, that of Bowman, Clark, Edson, Fennessey, Newell, Peck, Sprague, and Wilcox.

Just one hundred years ago Captain Shibal Cross came to Brookfield, took some land and laid out a farm. Twelve years later, in 1791, the first Nathaniel Wheatley, (5 II 1) came into town and bought out Captain Cross. Since then the place has always been held by a Nathaniel Wheatley, that being the name of the father and grandfather of the present occupant. A fine young man bearing the same name we hope may in his turn keep up the old homestead, which however is not suffered to grow old in appearance but despite its years is "forever charming and forever new."

During the afternoon the company were entertained by music, literary exercises by the young people, and by remarks by the older ones. Mr. Wheatley invited all present and as many more as might happen to be, to come to this place twelve years from this time to celebrate the centennial of the first Wheatley's appearance in Brookfield. Last but not least came the good things from the bountifully spread tables, the young people finding a pleasant supper room in the shade of the old willows. Nothing seemed lacking to make the occasion an enjoyable one, and all voted the reunion a decided success. E. L. W. Wilcox, (Edith,) read the following which she composed for the occasion:

“Welcome my friends to this dear old home,
Welcome here one and all;
Uncles, and aunts, and cousins,
Have well responded to our call.

From far and near we rally today,
On the old farm that you know
Captain Cross laid out in the woods so dense,
Just one hundred years ago.

Oh! If these walls could speak today,
And tell us their stories of sorrows and joys,
And echo the voices of father and mother,
And the merry band of girls and boys.

Time carries us back, as we're thinking now
Of the many gatherings in this home nest.
Where are the loved ones that we met?
Scattered on earth, or gone to rest.

Grandfather and grandmother, where are they?
Their portraits hang in the room close by,
Their guardian spirits are with us today,
They wait for us in the sweet bye and bye.

Uncle Jesse, too, has gone from our midst,
Dear kind uncle, we miss you today;
Cousin George, also, so happy and cheerful,
And aunt Harriet, too, have all passed away.

Aunt Lydia Ann, Lucinda and mother,
Mary and Fred, and Charlie have gone;
God has called them to better homes,
Taking them gently, one by one.

We cannot but think of old times and friends,
As we meet to welcome each other here;
We've covered their graves with beautiful flowers,
And shed for them affection's tears.

But let us now turn to the group before us,
Descendants of those good and true.
Has not their mantle of talent and virtue
Fallen upon each one of you?

I'm sure we're proud of our little circle,
Dentist and lawyer and teacher,
Dressmaker, doctor and farmer,
And who knows but a future Ward Beecher.

All honor to each learned profession;
But best of all that have come,
Are the loving parents so dear,
Who reign in our happy home.

Some from the classic halls of Dartmouth,
With highest honors come,
Some from the Randolph Normal school,
Their good reports bring home.

And some with high attainments,
Come from the school of great reform,
Where naughty boys are taught to take
Their officers by storm.

Others engaged in the noble work,
Of teaching the little ones A B C;
Others in a college of high renown,
Aspiring to the title of M. D.

And what shall we say of the older ones,
Farther along in the journey of life?
No blazoned title marks the name
Of father and mother, husband and wife.

WILLOW GROVE IN SUMMER, AND VIEW IN "THE GULL."

Contented and happy, toil they on
With nature (dear faithful friend!)
Gladly watching the children climb
The ladder of fame to the end.

Not one of our numerous number
Has disgraced the name we bear.
Not many for peace and good will,
Can with us compare.

Three cheers for the good old name,
Our father gave us long ago,
Eternal is that name above,
And honored here below.

Then long live the Wheatley name;
O! Never fear that it will die.
For well do they obey the command,
Increase and multiply.

God's blessing rest upon you all;
Do good by loving word and deed,
And when we bid to each "good bye,"
We'll say to each "God speed."

Our names we've all recorded now,
To treasure as a keepsake dear;
In the book of life, may an angel above
Record the name of each one here.

When we go home to the better land,
Oh, may there be no vacant chair.
With faces bright and hearts so light,
We'll have a Wheatley remion there.

May every brow wear a jewelled crown,
Whenever their God shall call;
We close with kind wishes for every friend,
And a fervent "God bless you all."

57 IV 16

Charlotte Wheatley was married 23 September, 1846, at Brookfield, Vt., to Nathan Parish Bowman, b Westford, Vt., 24 August, 1822. They lived six years on a farm in Westford and two years in Burlington, Vt., when Mr. Bowman was sheriff. In 1855 he became a custom house officer and they moved to Island Pond, Vt. During the war of the rebellion he was paymaster, gaining the title of Major. After the war closed he hired a plantation at Newberne, N. C. Returning to Vermont in 1867 they purchased a house on Main street, St. Johnsbury. Major Bowman entered the insurance business and was an active democrat in politics. He was elected judge for Caledonia County in 1876, (about the only democratic officer in the state) and was appointed postmaster at St. Johnsbury by President Cleveland. The Judge gave such good satisfaction that he held the office nearly through President Harrison's administration.

Charlotte Wheatley Bowman united with the Orthodox church at Brookfield, when only eleven years old. Father Wild was then pastor. She was an active Christian, being a successful Sunday school teacher when quite young. Upon their settlement in Westford she immediately united with the Congregational church there. At Island Pond she was active in Christian work, having part in organizing that church and Sabbath school. While South she and her daughter, Nellie, a lovable little angel, were truly idolized by the blacks. Residing in St. Johnsbury since 1867 she has borne her part as a faithful Christian woman in every good work, social, moral and in the church. She and her husband were bound up in their children and it was a severe blow to them when death entered their home and bore away their darling Nellie and their first son.

Mrs. Bowman had much literary ability. Her talent is shown quite well by the following lines to Nellie who died 20 May, 1869.

CHARLOTTE WHEATLEY BOWMAN. (57)

JUDGE N. P. BOWMAN, ST. JOHNSBURY, VT.

Nellie! the joy and wonder of our eyes
 Has left her friends, to view her native skies,
 Just as her rising sun began its way,
 Her morning fair, and every prospect gay,
 When growing virtues sparkled in her eyes,
 Which raised at once, love, hope, and sweet surprise,
 The lovely youth reclined her beauteous head,
 Nellie, alas! is numbered with the dead.
 As earliest roses of the blooming spring,
 Round which harmonious birds delight to sing,
 By lurking winter—by untimely frost,
 Are nipped, then fade and all their beauty lost.
 So this dear tender plant to early death,
 (Since called by Heaven) resigned her willing breath,
 But thrice three vernal seasons had she past,
 Ere nature failed, and Nellie breathed her last.
 A cankerous worm upon her vitals preyed,
 Death called his victim, she the call obeyed.
 Oh happy victim! thou hast changed the pain,
 For life and glory, and eternal gain,
 Fair charity with pleasure sees her rise,
 Borne by attending angels through the skies,
 With shouts of joy, the heavenly arches ring,
 While she appears before her Lord and King.
 We leave her there, nor do we fear to guess,
 She is sweetly roaming in climes of bliss,
 Let's cease to mourn, let not one doubt arise,
 And prepare to meet her, happy in the skies."

Charlotte was devoted to her home, giving the brightness of her life to it rather than to the most attractive social circle; a true wife and mother, she yet found time and strength for neighborly social and religious duties, in the parlors where she was welcome, but much more in the homes of the poor where she could carry sympathy and help, perhaps fitting up the children for Sunday school, or by the sick bed ministering to the sufferers. No one knows how much of this work she did, but testimony from many sources convinces us that when the books are opened the record will show faithfulness and success. She saw her husband and all her children one after another come to Christ.

She had cared for Mr. Bowman through a long sickness and before being taken sick had expressed the belief that her work was nearly done, and made extra effort to complete it, and seemed to have a call to special faithfulness. Immediately upon giving up she said she should not recover, and made all plans for her funeral. She spoke of wanting her old minister, Dr. L. O. Barstow of Burlington, to conduct the services. Also said "I shou'd like to die on a pleasant Sunday evening," and as the sun was setting the next bright Sunday afternoon she murmured, "My work is done; I have done what I could;" and passed quietly away, to meet her children and friends who had gone before. She believed they would be leaning over the battlements to welcome her. Hers was a beautiful life.

So not alone we land upon that shore,
 'Twill be as though we had been there before;
 We shall meet more we know,
 Than we can meet below,
 And find our home like some returning dove,
 And be at home at once with our eternal love.

Her wishes were all carried out at her funeral. Mr. Bowman married again, 7 April, 1885, Mrs. Rosalie Denison Hall, a most estimable helpmate.

years, but during the last two years his father's ill health had given him much experience in the care and responsibility of the farming. He continued work on the farm, with short terms at the district school and the academy, until he was married, when the farm was divided and he chose the northern half, on which a year later he built a brick house about twenty-five rods from the old homestead. There with his wife Ruby he lived to celebrate their golden wedding and to bring up five children to be useful members of society. Besides making a success of farming he was elected many times to offices of trust by his townsmen. He and his wife were for fifty years active members of the Congregational church. In politics he was a Republican.

Commencing to farm for himself at the age of seventeen, he has continued for nearly sixty years to till the ancestral fields. His early educational advantages were limited to the district school and a few terms in the academy, but to these he has supplemented much study and reading at home. He has the reputation of being a good manager and careful business man, successful and prosperous. The esteem of his fellow citizens is shown by repeatedly electing him to town office or to represent them in the legislature. Being a man of excellent judgment his advice was often sought upon important matters. He transacted considerable public business, such as guardian, and administration of estates of deceased townsmen. He gave his two daughters a full course of study at the Mt. Holyoke Seminary. In early life John voted with the Whigs, but since the Fremont campaign he has been a staunch Republican.

Since her stepmother's ill health she has remained at home, and after her death Mary was housekeeper for her father. As his eyesight failed him she became eyes for him, and acted as private secretary, thus carrying on much public business that he otherwise would have been obliged to leave undone.

ANDREW WHEATLEY. 72 IV 20

Andrew Wheatley first married his cousin Sarah Wheatley, who died in 1850 without offspring. He was again married 29 November, 1855, at Lima, Iowa, to Lucy Andrews, b 20 August, 1835, at Westfield, N. Y. They lived on a farm in Lima until the spring of 1869, when they moved to Crystal, Tama county, residing there six years. In 1875 they moved to Manson, Calhoun county, and in 1885 they removed to Lohrville, Iowa, where they now reside.

His principal occupation was farming until sixty years of age. As a citizen he was much respected, filling various offices of trust for township purposes in each community where he lived. He cast his first Presidential vote in 1848 for Gen. Zachary Taylor, and voted for all Republican nominees for President down to President William McKinley, and believes in his management of government matters.

They first lived at the Mill Village in Brookfield, where Mr. French was interested in the manufacture of forks. In 1837 a man in Brookfield by the name of Adams began the manufacture of spring steel forks, the first ever made, at a little shop south east of the Centre. Justus W. French, seeing the value of the invention, formed a company for the more extensive production at the Mill Village in Brookfield, Vt., later moving to larger works, with a new partnership at White River Village, Vt. These tools were famed far outside this country, being much sought for in the English market. Mr. Adams could never be induced to associate with men of capital to enlarge the business and never profited much by his invention. Their home was at the Mills in Brookfield, Vt., where Marinda died a few months after her only child was born. Later Mr. French and his daughter moved to White River, Vt.

Jesse C. Wheatley was married 16 March, 1852, at Brookfield, Vt., to Sarah A. Sprague, b Brookfield. They lived on the West hill four years and then moved home to care for the farm and his father and mother. His parents lived to a comfortable old age, having occasion to be thankful for such a son and daughter. These two faithful guardians of the blind and aged relatives bid fair to receive the same kindly care from their son and daughter. Friends were sure to find a cordial welcome at this hospitable home. Jesse was a man of rare physical health until past seventy years of age, when he became troubled with an indolent ulcer on his right hand which hospital physicians deemed serious enough to warrant the removal of three fingers, leaving only the thumb and little finger. This reduced his strength but had no effect upon his cheerful disposition. Sarah, his wife, was a lady of an erect figure and dignified presence with a loving and pleasant disposition.

They lived at the Milis Village in Brookfield where he was a merchant for several years doing an extensive business in farm produce and general merchandise. He held several town offices and was constable and postmaster. He was very active mentally and physically. Intelligent, happy, and of a cheerful disposition, he was fond of his family and friendly to all. The whole community mourned his early death. His wife was a lady of commanding figure, of fixed opinions in morals and religion, and in the seven years of their married life made him an efficient and exemplary wife, and was a devoted mother to their only son. She was married again several years later to Marcus Peck.

Lucinda Colburn Fay was married 20 May, 1832, at Lowell, Mass., to Col. Thomas Nesmith, b 7 September, 1788, at Windham, N. H., d 31 July, 1870, at Lowell, Mass. Previous to marriage she was in Derry, N. H., as principal of Adams Female Seminary. Her education was gained at Miss Grant's school at Ipswich, Mass. Lucinda was a woman of a strong religious nature, refined and intellectual and of much personal beauty. Mr.

Nesmith's education was such as could be obtained from the district and high schools of Derry, N. H. He was a pioneer in the linen industry, beginning with a horse and two wheeled cart. He gathered the thread from the country people and carried it home to his grandmother to color; his sisters wove it into cloth, for which he found a ready sale in Lynn and other large towns. By this means, at the end of a few years he had accumulated six thousand dollars, with which he founded a more extensive business. When he went to Lowell, manufacturing corporations and city institutions were just assuming tangible form. He was a member of the city government the first two years of its existence, and he helped forward many enterprises that were struggling into being. In the second war for independence he enlisted 15 September, 1814, from Windham, N. H., and was a lieutenant in Capt. Nathaniel G. Bradley's company which was stationed at Portsmouth, N. H. In 1820 he was colonel of the 8th N. H. militia. His integrity was not questioned, and his moral and courteous bearing made him a pattern man in business affairs, a good citizen and neighbor, a gentleman in social life. One of his benevolent acts was the founding of the "Nesmith Library" in his native town. To the deserving poor of Lowell he left the "Nesmith Fund" of twenty-five thousand dollars, which is now in the hands of trustees and has been a great benefit to many worthy people.

Ellen E. Wheatley was married 1 May, 1883, at Brookfield, Vermont, to George Day Wheeler, b Brookfield, Vt., 4 April, 1859. They were both members of the Brookfield Congregational church, Mrs. Wheeler being a member of its choir as long as she remained in town. Soon after marriage they settled in Barre, Vermont, where Mr. Wheeler bought out a well established hardware business. In the summer of 1895 he was thrown from a wheel and severely injured. It was while being treated for this injury that his attention was called to Osteopathy. Finding himself much benefitted and ultimately cured by this treatment he decided to take up the study of Osteopathy, and with this end in view they sold their beautiful home and successful business and moved to Kirksville, Missouri, where the school of Osteopathy is located. After two years of faithful study he graduated with honors in a class of ninety nine. July 11, 1899, he successfully passed the examination before the Massachusetts state medical board and became a registered physician of the commonwealth. He has quite a reputation as a tenor singer, being a member of numerous musical societies. He is a Mason, a member of the Chapter and Commandery where he has held every office except the highest. Their home is 36 Lake street, Melrose, Mass.

Mr. Fennessy went into the blacking business with his father-in-law under the firm name of B. F. Brown & Co. in 1869. In December, 1880, Edward became sole proprietor, paying Frank Brown $25,000 for his share, his mother-in-law being paid a large royalty for life. Under his management the business was very much enlarged, with factories in Montreal, London and Paris. Ella attended school at Northampton, Mass., but finished her education at Stamford, Conn. Her manners were easy and graceful which with the exquisite taste displayed in her dress are frequently the subject of comment even by strangers. She was an ideal wife and hostess, hospitable and gracious, withal carrying herself with much characteristic dignity. She is naturally a devoted and most efficient mother to her interesting and attractive family of six children. Her residence is 733 Washington street, Brookline, Mass.

faction to both parents and pupils. The many different positions which she has held have been filled acceptably. In the fall of 1892 she visited at Fremont, where she was entertained by John B. Loveland, author of Loveland genealogy. Leaving Fremont she joined her brother Irving at Chicago where she visited the World's fair with him and had the best of opportunities given her to familiarize herself with this World's exposition. Her home for twenty five years has been for the most part in and near Boston. She is a woman of strong character, and has always been ready to sacrifice her own comfort for that of others.

158 V 56

Edith L. Wheatley was married 23 June, 1875, at Brookfield, to Henry A. Wilcox M. D., b Brookfield, 1844, d Stamford, Conn., 10 April, 1877. Edith was a loving woman of quick sensibilities of whom it was said "she had a heart full of true religion and a head free from theology true or false." There are names that have in them all the sweetness of music, and when they are spoken they bring peace and comfort and beautiful memories; such was Edie. She was so gentle and the elements so mixed in her that nature might stand up and say to all, "this is a true woman." By her friends she was frequently spoken of as "Lily of the Valley." She was of medium height, rather stout, with a face shining with quiet happiness and unselfishness; a soft, sweet voice, which had no harshness when commanding, although she was a strict disciplinarian. She graduated at the Randolph normal school in 1867, and began teaching at the age of sixteen, following for nine years the work she loved so well. She realized early that life was not meant for play day, and when she became a teacher she took with her into the schoolroom a strong faith and earnest endeavor for the highest development of her pupils to fit them for the various walks of life, to make better citizens and give them the happier, higher type of man and womanhood, for she sought more than mental progress, even moral and spiritual growth. A short but happy period of her life was after her marriage to Dr. Henry A. Wilcox, who was a graduate from the N. Y. Homeopathic Medical College in 1873 and immediately entered a successful practice at Winchenden, Mass. Their beautiful home there was a spiritual and social centre for a short two years. As sunlight casts shadows, happiness, too, throws a shadow, and the shadow is sadness. Edith became a mother in 1876. The following February Dr. Wilcox had to go south for his health, but returned in April, dying on the way home. After his death Edith, almost broken hearted, made her home with her father at "Willow Grove" where, after a year of great suffering she died four years later. Some lives seem too short. To us these two appeared to be broken off at the wrong place in the midst of earnest successful work. Two Christians have gone to their reward; both joined the church when young. Dr. Wilcox was a Mason and Odd Fellow and was prominent in Vermont and Massachusetts medical societies. Edith wrote many poems which were a grand success in showing us the beauty there is in common things. All through her life with its sad changes she kept that wonderful serenity of mind and that happy faculty of living above the trials of life. Assisted by her brother Hannibal she did good work in bringing this history down to 1880, hoping to see it printed.

He taught school several terms and was an officer at the Vermont Reform School at Vergennes two years, in 1879 and 1880. He worked during this period on this history, continuing the search of Revolutionary Rolls, State papers and Town records, and taking dates from tombstones in several New England states, in many instances necessitating much special journeying. He usually wrote letters to the local papers concerning these and such trips as to the Centennial at Philadelphia in 1876, to Washington, Luray Caverns, Gettysburg, Yellowstone Park, Montreal, Quebec and Chicago World's Fair in 1893. He has been regular correspondent of the Boston Journal since 1882, writes articles quite often for medical journals and in 1894 published a book on Generation. The following extract is from the Strafford County, N. H., Biographical Review:

H. P. WHEATLEY RESIDENCE FARMINGTON, N. H.

"H. P. Wheatley, M. D. is one of the leading physicians of Farmington, N. H. He graduated from St. Johnsbury, Vt., Academy in 1876, three years later he received his diploma at the University of Vermont and graduated from the medical department of the same institution in 1881. The next year he came to Farmington, where he has since gained a large patronage. His reputation for skill and knowledge is founded upon his successful operations and treatment of difficult and stubborn cases of disease. He is a republican and has served at different periods as member of the board of health and on the board of pension examining surgeons, being appointed by President McKinley and reappointed by President Roosevelt. He was made a Mason in 1881 at the Mystic Star lodge in Brookfield, Vt., and with Mrs. Wheatley joined the Eastern Star of Farmington in 1898. He is a member of Woodbine lodge, No. 41, I. O. O. F., and of Mad River Encampment of Farmington, N. H., and he and Mrs. Wheatley belong to the Rebekah lodge therewith connected. They both attend the Congregational church of Farmington whose teachings harmonize with their religious views. Both are well known in the social circles of this vicinity and their hospitable home, a brick house, planned and built by the Doctor the year they were married is an attractive centre for their hosts of friends." Doctor is a member of the Vermont and New Hampshire medical societies. He was a charter member of the Delta Mu fraternity.

Irving Wheatley acquired his education in the public schools of his native town and completed a four years' course at the St. Johnsbury academy, graduating in 1880. Several years following this he was teacher and assistant to the superintendent in the Kansas State Reform School at Topeka, Kansas; supplementing his work there by the study of architecture and perfecting himself in civil engineering. In 1886 he entered the employ of the Atkinson, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway Co., as transit man in an engineering corps; six months later he was put in charge of a locating party which located a number of their important lines in Kansas, Indian Territory and Colorado. When this railway began the extension of their line from Kansas City to Chicago he was transferred to this division and made superintendent of bridges, buildings and water service with headquarters at Fort Madison, Iowa. In 1890 he gave up railroad work and associated himself with the North Western Contracting Company (a construction company of Chicago), where he had charge of the construction of the Grant Locomotive Works and several other large manufacturing plants in and about Chicago, also parts of Chicago's elevated railway system. In 1892 while yet in the employ of the same company he had general supervision of the work of building many of the wonderful productions of architecture on the World's Fair grounds, among them being the terminal railway station, the electrical and U. S. government building. He had charge of the placing of many of the exhibits for both foreign and domestic exhibitors. As all the contractors were compelled by their contracts to keep the buildings in repair during the entire six months of the fair, it gave him a rare opportunity to familiarize himself in detail with this great World's exposition. Soon after the World's Fair he associated himself with B. Langtry Sons of Strong City, Kansas, railroad and general contractors, as superintendent of their contracts in Missouri, Iowa and Illinois, with offices at Fort Madison, Iowa. February 22, 1902 he began work on the big contract to fill a part of China Basin in Frisco Bay, California. B. Langtry Sons in consideration of one million dollars took this contract of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad Co. with the understanding that in two years time they will move the big hill back of the historic old Presidio and reclaim sixty eight acres of territory now presided over by Neptune. This will give the Santa Fe a level substantial tract of land for terminal facilities. During the winter of 1902 Superintendent I. N. Wheatley was transferred to the Pacific coast department with office at Los Angeles where the above work will probably keep him for the next two years.

163 V 56

Tenney Hall Wheatley B. S., M. D. Two of the Wheatley characteristics are love for nature and the reading of good books. The subject of this sketch early manifested these distinctive traits. His love for "the open" was deep. His happiest boyhood days were spent in fishing down the Falls Brook to Bill's Hole, or roaming the woods and hills on hunting or trapping expeditions. He loved to "line" the wild honey bees to their sylvan hive in some stately hemlock, or, seated beside the bee house, observe these little lovers of the flowers come home laden with nectar. This nature study was cultivated and developed by procuring from the unique Brookfield library, an institution now over one hundred years old, Major Nathaniel Wheatley being one of the founders, books by such wholesome writers as Rev. Elijah Kellogg and Henry Thoreau. At first he attended the Vermont Methodist seminary in Montpelier but in the fall of 1887 he entered the St. Johnsbury academy and graduated in 1888. During this academy year he was elected class orator. Then for two years he taught school. In the summer of 1889 while taking a carriage drive in company with his father he called on the late U. S. Senator Justin S. Morrill at his country house in Strafford. The senator was a trustee of the University of Vermont and advised a college course. This and a visit by Prof. W. W. Cooke of the university decided him to enter college, from which he graduated in the class of '93. In college he was one of the associate editors of the University Cynic for two years and one of the charter members of the Kappa Sigma fraternity. It was during his course of study that the bill to establish a separate agricultural college was introduced into the legislature. This bill had passed the House and was before the Senate when the subject of this sketch wrote the famous petition signed by a large number of the university students, and accompanied by a student delegation, went to Montpelier and made a speech in the Senate before a committee of that body. The result was a killing of the bill. His college expenses were largely met by his work as assistant secretary of the Vermont Dairymen's Association and lectures at the winter meetings of the Vermont Board of Agriculture. After graduation he visited the Columbian Exposition and matriculated in the University of Chicago, but in a few weeks sickness compelled him to return East. When health returned he entered the University of Vermont Medical College and graduated in 1896. He was a member of the Delta Mu fraternity. In the summer of 1896 he went to New York city for post graduate and dispensary work and in 1897 opened an office at his present address, 151 Hewes street, Brooklyn, N. Y. He joined Plymouth church May 16, 1897, at the time of the semi-centennial celebration of this historic church. He has been identified in the work of the Brooklyn Bureau of charities, president of the Seth Low club of his ward, received two appointments from the board of health and is a medical examiner for the John Hancock Life Insurance Co. Like Prof. Drummond he believes "the greatest thing in this world is love," that the aim of all should be to make the world better for our having lived in it.

After sixteen years of faithful service he was detached from the Boston office in the spring of 1898, and sent in charge of the mails in the Santiago campaign. In the summer he was appointed postmaster of Guatanamo, Cuba, where he died of yellow fever Thursday, October 27, 1898. Postmaster Thomas of Boston thought very highly of him and immediately made arrangements with the war department for the transportation of his body home. His widow, a most estimable woman, and her four bright children received the sincere sympathy of the general public, who contributed most generously to her comfort. Walter Spicer was the first employee of the Post Office Department to die in the war service. The Postmaster General expressed deep sympathy for the bereaved family, and started a movement to provide a pension for this class of cases.

David Andrew Loveland was married 20 November, 1860, to Clara A. Olds, b 28 March, 1840, Norwich, Vt.; daughter of Franklin Olds. He was the grandson of Eunice Wheatley Loveland and of the seventh generation of the descendants of Thomas Loveland who settled in Glastonbury, Connecticut, in 1635. Mr. Loveland was educated in the public schools of Norwich, Vt., and fitted for college at the Thetford, Vt., Academy. He never entered college, however, but shortly after leaving the academy he purchased a farm three miles northwest of the village of Norwich, Vermont, and began the life of a farmer. He was an entertaining conversationalist. After seven years of farm life Mr. Loveland sold his farm and during the years of 1868 to 1872 was engaged in the business of railroad supplies and contractor in New York City. In 1872 he returned to Norwich and purchased the farm, which he owned and cultivated at the time of his death, although he removed from the farm to the village of Norwich in 1881. He was very much interested in the welfare of his native town and took an active part in every attempt to improve it, and especially the common schools. He was an earnest advocate of higher education for the young men and women of the town. He was one of the founders of the Norwich Library Association in which he took great interest to the time of his death. In politics Mr. Loveland was an enthusiastic republican and for most of the time during the last twenty years of his life was chairman of the Republican town committee. He was frequently honored by his fellow townsmen and at different times filled nearly every office in the gift of the town. He served as Selectman in 1874, 1875, 1876, and 1881. He was Justice of the Peace and Trial Justice of the town for many years before his death. He was frequently called upon by his fellow citizens to take care of trust funds, settle estates, and act as guardian for minors, and other similar trusts. September 6, 1892, he was elected to represent the town of Norwich in the 12th Bi-ennial Session of the General Assembly of the State of Vermont, where he served with marked ability. He was a mem-

In this body he was a member of the Committee on Highways and of the Committee on Agriculture. He died at Norwich, Vermont, October 7, 1898, having won the love and confidence of all who knew him by his honest, upright and unselfish life among them. Shortly after his death his associates in the Senate passed the following resolutions:

He is a man of which much can be said, if his odd sayings and doings were recorded. He was always kind and generous but his love of fun predominated. By enterprise and energy he succeeded in greatly increasing the productiveness of the farm on which he was born, where he still lives. Like all Lovelands and Wheatleys in politics he fully believes in the Republican party. Sophia and Annie, who suffer much from ill health and have never married, share a living with him on the farm, doing many acts of kindness at home and in the community.

In 1894 he bought the farm next north of "Willow Grove" of Willam Wheatley and fitted the buildings with modern conveniences. To this place, known as "Meadow View," he took his bride upon their return from a wedding trip to the Pan American exhibition at Buffalo.  She was a daughter of John and Deborah (Haines) Kellum.

Dr. Hodge was born in Hardwick, Vt., February 20, 1822.
 He was converted and united with the Baptist Church in the fall of 1839. A few months afterward he felt a rising impression, which soon grew into a settled conviction that he was called of

REV. MARVIN G. HODGE, D. D.

God to become a preacher of the Gospel. He pursued academic studies at Derby, Vt. In June, 1843, he was ordained at East Charleston, Vt. He had a pastorate at Colechester and Hinesburg, Vt., and at Stillwater, N. Y., and in Oct., 1854, began a very successful pastorate of six and a half years, with the Hanson Place Church in Brooklyn, N. Y. Here his health broke down, and in 1861 he sought recovery in the West. From June, 1861, to the spring of 1864, he ministered to a church in Beaver Dam, Wisconsin. Then followed two years of service as District Secretary of the American Baptist Home Mission Society for New England. He became a pastor at Janesville, Wis., February 1, 1865, and continued until September, 1871, after which he spent a winter with the Twenty-fifth street Church in New York City. And on May 1, 1872, began service as pastor of the First Church of Kalamazoo, Mich. This continued until the fall of 1878, when he went to Milwaukee, Wis., and became pastor of the First Baptist Church in that city, and so continued until the spring of 1881, when he returned to Janesville, Wis., and entered on a second pastorate with this church, which continued over sixteen years, and ended June 1, 1897. However, the Doctor's ability as a preacher was still in demand in Wisconsin, and for the second time he was called to minister in the church at Beaver Dam. In 1849 Dr. Hodge received the honorary degree of A. M. from the University of Vermont, and the same from Rochester University in 1854. He received also the degree of D. D. from the University of Chicago, in 1867. Few are the men who have carried these honorary titles more worthily. After the death of his wife, April 11, 1900, Dr. Hodge felt that he was unable longer to carry the responsibilities of a pastorate, and so, May 1, closing his work at Beaver Dam, he went to the home of his oldest daughter, Mrs. E. F. Welch, at Oak Park, Ill., where he spent the remainder of his life. His fraternal interest in the younger men of the ministry has always been an inspiration, and thousands of all ages and classes, of his own and of other Christian persuasions, have looked upon him as a friend. To know him was to love him.

Nathaniel Wheatley Perry was born in Cabot, Vt., May 21 1801, married Chrissa Collins of Williamstown, Vt; died in Burlington, Vt., November 28, 1887. He was a physician and practised successfully his profession for many years in Williamstown, Vt. During the war of the rebellion he was a surgeon in the army, stationed in the U. S. General Hospital at Burlington. Dr. Perry was a very honorable christian man, a life-long member of the Congregational Church. He was as attentive in the practice of his profession among the poor as among the rich. He died at the age of eighty-seven years. His wife survived him several years. His children were:

- 1 Helen Maria Perry, married A. K. Ballard of Burlington, Vt. He was a manufacturer of pottery. Died about 1870. They had several children, all of whom died in infancy. Mrs. Ballard still resides in Burlington.
- 2 Martha Jane Perry, married Theodore Prentiss, a lawyer. Resides in Watertown, Wis. They have two children.
- 3 Clementine Submit Perry, born Williamstown, Vt. 1836; died in Burlington at the age of about forty years.
- 4 Collins Perry, died in boyhood, in Williamstown, Vt.

We find that many of the families who intermarried with the Wheatleys in England have also come to America; and in some instances have formed like domestic ties in present generations. Among those who are citizens of New England towns in common with the Wheatleigh families are the Barker, Bassett, Black, Drake, Evans, Fennessy, Hall, Haynes, Holmes, Howe, Paine or Paine, Parker, Piper, Roberts, Rawlins or Rollins, Skinner, Waring, White, Wingate and Wood. These family names that were evidently common in the same neighborhood with Wheatleys in England two or three hundred years ago are today found in the same communities. Doubtless many are descendants from the same families. Edmund Wingate, the son of Martha Wheatleigh and Roger Wingate (see page 14) was a near relative of Sir Francis Wingate, the justice who sent John Bunyan to Bedford jail in 1660. Their descendants, who are numerous in southern New Hampshire, are very active christian citizens.

POKOMOONSHINE PICNIC GROUNDS.

I want to extend to relatives an invitation to make my home and camps a resting place whenever stopping in this part of New England. There are many pleasant places about Farmington for a day's outing, and my camps at Alton Bay and Loon Cove, Lake Winnepesaukee, (which John L. Stoddard says has the most beautiful scenery of any lake in the world,) is at your service, with steam launch or boats.

H. P. WHEATLEY.
